Tennessee Towns Refuse To

Abandon Plants

UNION CITY, Tenn.—(P)—The Tennessee Valley Authority's proposed electric power hook-up of West Tennessee towns faced a bargier Wednesday that apparently threatened its completion.

The snag that has the TVA program for expansion blocked at least temporarily is the refusal of three towns to abandon municipally-owned power plants for the TVA system of distribution.

Union City, Dyersburg and Tren-

Union City, Dyersburg and Trenton stood firmly opposed to entering into a 20-year contract whereby they buy electricity from the TVA for resale to inhabitants. A fourth municipality, Covington, also is withdrawing its approval.

Acceptance by these four cities is needed by the TVA to complete a characteristic control of the true of true of "loop" of towns.
